

Government Cloning by Sage Ruiz

In my opinion, the whole idea of government cloning has already been proven, with Donald Marshall at the very center of it all. Marshall came out in 2011 on Facebook as a clone, explaining how he found himself in a so-called "cloning station" run by Queen Elizabeth. According to Marshall, his family was already living in the cloning center, but to the best of my knowledge he's never mentioned why. Though his story's details change ever so slightly every time he tells it, his discussion on the topic is extremely extensive, and the base story has remained the same; While he was at the cloning center, he discovered that the whole thing was run by what we today call the Illuminati, and that the cloning itself didn't start until after World War 2, when political figures began to bring movie stars and celebrities to the cloning facilities, where they chose who remembered it and who didn't. The clones are allegedly being used for several things, such as entertainment (gladiator style, sexual perversions, and Illuminati rituals) and medical reasons, say if the original needed a new kidney transplant, they would harvest one of the clones kidneys.

Now, I'm sure you don't need me to tell you about Donald Marshall, because if you're here reading this right now, there's a pretty good chance you already know who he is, because I swear everyone who talks about celebrity cloning always attributes something to him. But just because it started with him, doesn't mean he is the only form of proof as to whether or not the government is really cloning celebrities. There are several commonly discussed celebrities when it comes to celebrity cloning, such as Eminem, Avril Lavigne, and Britney Spears. Now, before I continue, just keep in mind that these clones supposedly diminish the "original copy's" mental capacity, making them more compliant and/or obedient, and on top of that, the clone itself is meant to be more obedient than the original, so all you would have to do would kill the original and control the clone, making them your personal slave, in theory.

The proof is all around us, we just need to look.

In 2005, Eminem got into a really bad car crash, it was a miracle that he survived. After his brush with death, he submitted himself into rehab for 4 years, then came out a whole different person. Can you see where I'm going with this? Eminem was a very strongly opinionated man who stood by his beliefs no matter what, so what could have happened to him in rehab that turned him into a whole new person?

They cloned him!

Depending on who you ask, Eminem died either in the crash or during his stay in "rehab", but either way, he was murdered before his return to the public eye.

There have also been videos of these clones "glitching" or malfunctioning somehow, uploaded to Youtube and several other forms of social media, showing them either rocking back and forth for 10 minutes or completely shutting down. I mean, just in Google alone the search "clone malfunctions" brought up 126,000 results, the first 5 being videos.

Like I said earlier, I think the proof is all around us, it's just a matter of delving a little bit deeper.